Just concluded Bihar assembly elections have brought to the fore two surprising elements which may change political equations in the future, though in limited extent. First is, the rise of Asaduddin Owaisi's All India Majlis-e-Ittehadul Muslimeen in Bihar, who has got five seats in the state assembly. This is very surprising as political polarization of such an extent has never been seen in Bihar. Though Bihar is a state where, communal equations matter most. But, the voters had never voted tremendously to a purely communal party which is confined to a single minority community. This is a very danger sign for entire Indian polity. AIMIM's entry into assembly is an indication of new era in Bihar as the party will be detrimental to Congress. The reason is obvious. Congress considers Muslim vote bank is its reserved treasure. But, AIMIM has shaken that belief though in little extent. Congress will have to change its strategy in future if it has to win the elections. Muslims do not trust Congress and they have gone far away from the party after Babri demolition. Now, they have got a pure option of a party which is committed to their welfare. They firmly believe that, Congress has done only lip service so far for them. Not only in Bihar, in every election in future, AIMIM will continue to harass Congress by eating out their votes. It is very interesting to note that, originally a small party with roots in the Old City in Hyderabad — has won five seats in the assembly. Mr Owaisi has been making a concerted effort to expand his party's base in Bihar's Seemanchal region, particularly Kishanganj — which has an overwhelming Muslim majority — for over five years now. It won a by-poll in the region last year, but has emerged as a major force this time around. The rise of AIMIM has given a severe setback to Congress, which has shown extremely dismal performance. Though AIMIM has got only five seats, it has affected voters mindset in other constituencies. Mr Owaisi is a controversial figure. While he speaks the language of constitutionalism and seeks rights for Muslims and other marginalized groups, his party has often engaged in extremist rhetoric and even hate speech. But what explains his growing popularity, with his party winning seats in places as varied as Maharashtra and Bihar? As Congress' appeasement of Muslims has given strength to BJP which has emerge from Hindu backlash, AIMIM has also gained ground due to Congress only lip service to minorities. Muslims in India, after the trauma of Partition, have been sceptical of solely identity-based political formations and have invested their lot with secular formations and stuck to the democratic mainstream. But the rise of the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) has led to greater alienation — the inability of the older “secular” parties to fight the BJP, and increasing disillusionment with these forces, has also led to a search for alternatives. Those criticising Owaisi for “cutting” the votes of other Opposition parties are doing a disservice to Indian democracy, for he is as entitled to participate and contest elections as any other formation. On his part, Mr Owaisi must consistently ensure that his party remains wedded to the plural, peaceful, democratic, constitutional path and doesn't engage in minority communalism. The second surprising element is while on one hand communal party is emerging in Bihar, left parties got some sizable presence in assembly. They have got sixteen seats which is not bad in the wake of their dismal performance elsewhere. A communal party is entering Bihar assembly and at the same time secular left parties have sizable presence is a very surprising element. Bihar people's mindset is divided in various ideologies and the recent results is its manifestation.
